NOTES ON THE BACKING TRACKS

These accompaniment tracks contain the complete score of CATS by Andrew Lloyd Webber. All the songs and musical intervals are featured in the tracks. They also include all the official sound effects used during the show, e.g. driving car noise, a siren and Macavity's laughter.

Several songs are divided into numerous tracks, in order to match the musical breaks in the score and the staging.

Alternative tracks are included for some of the songs. These tracks can replace the respective standard tracks of the same numbers.

There are cut down tracks for some of the numbers. These tracks can be used for promotional performances or likewise purposes.

There are also several additional tracks that can be used for different purposes such as promotion or recordings.

More information on how to use the several tracks is given in the additional notes on the track list.

The tracks mainly follow the 1999 version of the score that was used in the final years of the original London production. Other influences are the 1990s Hamburg, 2002 Berlin and the 2003 UK tour scores.

Nonetheless, the tap dance of "The Old Gumbie Cat" is slightly shortened, compared to the late London version.

Also, unlike the London production at that time, "The Ballad of Billy M'Caw" is set as standard for the second act. It can be replaced with "In Una Tepide Notte" though, which is added as an alternative track.

NOTES ON “GROWLTIGER”

The original London stage production and “Cats” album featured the song “Billy M’Caw” in “Growltiger’s Last Stand” but was changed, somewhat against my wishes, in New York for the pastiche Italian aria which was felt to be more of a crowd-pleaser than “Billy M’Caw”.

“Billy M’Caw” is an unpublished poem by TS Eliot and the Italian aria was the translation made many years ago of “Growltiger’s Last Stand” from the original Italian edition of “Old Possum’s Book of Practical Cats”. I much prefer “Billy M’Caw”.
