MY OWN HOME (JUNGLE BOOK THEME)

Words and music by Richard M. Sherman and Robert B. Sherman.

First, let me introduce myself. In the jungles of India they call me Bagheera the Panther. Now I'm going to tell you the story of a small boy named Mowgli. I found him in the dark, quiet jungle on the night it all began. I heard his hungry cries and knew he would perish without a mother's care. Yet it was many days' travel to the nearest Man Village. So, instead, carrying the little blanketed bundle carefully in my mouth, I took him to a nearby family of wolves. The mother wolf was happy to have another baby, and Mowgli grew up healthy and strong with his wolf brothers and sisters. No Man-cub ever was happier. Then, when he was but ten seasons old, word swept through the jungle that Shere Khan the Tiger had come to kill the young boy before he reached his manhood, for Shere Khan hated all men. The wolf pack leaders decided that Mowgli must be returned to the world where he belonged—to the Man Village where he would be safe. It was agreed that I, Bagheera, should be the one to escort him to the Man Village. We had often taken long walks together, so Mowgli rode happily astride my back—until I told him where we were going. "I don't want to go back to the Man Village!" he protested. "I want to stay in the jungle!" He made a terrible fuss, and up to the very moment we were settling down to sleep up high in a tree, I was forced to repeat, again and again, how impossible it would be for a young boy to survive alone in the jungle.

BAGHEERA: Now get some sleep. We've got a long journey ahead of us tomorrow.

MOWGLI: I want to stay in the jungle.

BAGHEERA: Ha! You wouldn't last one day.

MOWGLI: I'm not afraid. I can look out for myself.

KAA: Say now, what have we here? Ooo, it's a Man-cub. A delicious Man-cub.

MOWGLI: Oh, go away and leave me alone!

BAGHEERA: Oh, that's just what I should do, but I'm not. Now please go to sleep, Man-cub.

KAA: Yes, Man-cub. Please go to sleep. Please go to sleep. Sleep, little Man-cub, rest in peace.

"TRUST IN ME" SONG

When I dozed off, Kaa the constrictor, a powerful python with hypnotic eyes, soon had Mowgli completely in his power. When a slight rustling noise disturbed me, I opened a sleepy eye just in time to see Mowgli completely wrapped up in Kaa's powerful coils. The python was ready to make a late-evening snack out of my little Man-cub friend. "Hold it, Kaa!" I roared, and the sudden noise was enough to make the python pause. He turned his attention to me, which was what I wanted, but I forgot about his hypnotic eyes! In a few moments he had me hypnotized! Keeping two victims hypnotized at the same time was too much for Kaa. And while he was working on me, Mowgli awoke from his trance and wiggled out of the python's coils. Then, smart lad that he is, he pushed the heavy coils off the branch, and they went tumbling to the ground, pulling the rest of their owner along behind. Kaa not only ended up in a heap, but got a knot in his tail besides. The last we saw of him he was going off in a huff, hissing...

KAA: Ooo, this is going to slow down my slithering!

The next morning we were awakened by an earthshaking, tree-shaking rumble. It was the Dawn Patrol March of the Elephants with their leader, proud Colonel Hathi, calling out commands at the head of his pachyderm parade.

"COLONEL HATHI'S MARCH" SONG

MOWGLI: Hello. What are you doing?

BABY: Shh. Drilling.

MOWGLI: Can I do it, too?

BABY: Sure. Just do what I do. But don't talk in ranks. It's against regulations.

HATHI: To the rear—march!

BABY: The other way. Turn around!

HATHI: Hup, two, three, four! Keep it up, two, three, four! To the rear—ho! Company, halt!

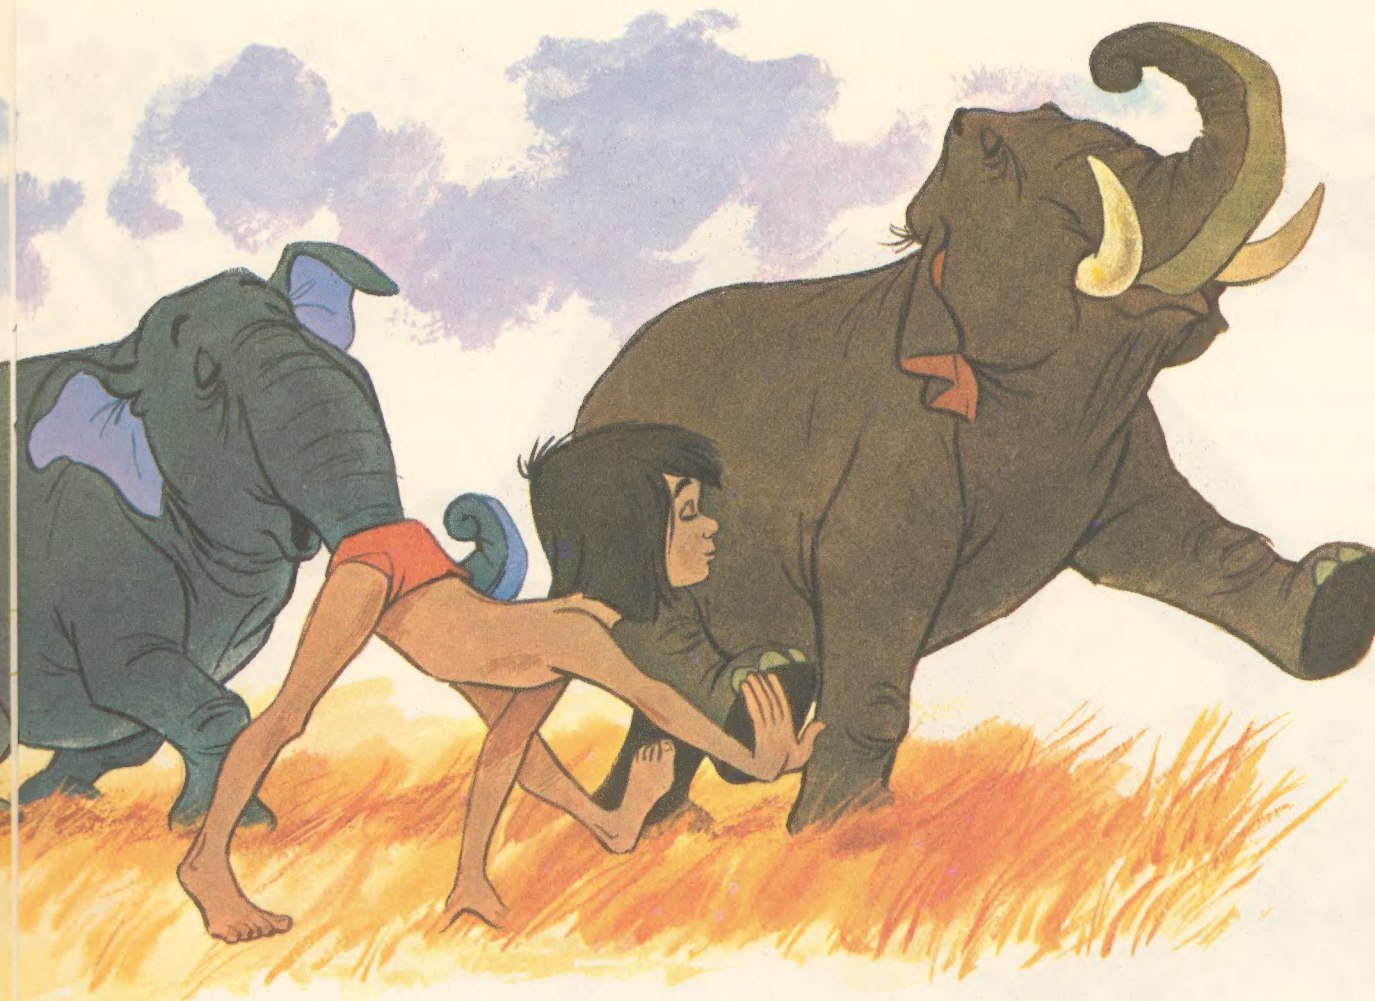

BABY: That means "Stop."

WINIFRED: March, march, march. My feet are killing me!

ELEPHANT: I'm putting in for a transfer to another herd!

HATHI: Silence in the ranks! Dress up that line! Ah, pull it in, Winifred. Inspection, arms! Wipe off that silly grin, soldier. This is the army! Eyes front!

Tsk, tsk. Lieutenant, that haircut is not regulation! Rather on the gaudy side, don't you think? There, that's better. And as for you—oh, there you are. Ha, ha! Let's keep those heels together, shall we, son?

BABY: Okay, Pop, sir.

HATHI: Yes, now that's better. Well, a new recruit, eh? Ha, ha, ha! I say, what happened to your trunk?

MOWGLI: Hey! Stop that!

HATHI: Hah! A Man-cub! Oh, this is treason! Sabotage! I'll have no Man-cub in my jungle!

MOWGLI: It's not your jungle!

BAGHEERA: Hold it, hold it! I can explain, Hathi.

HATHI: Colonel Hathi, if you please, sir.

BAGHEERA: Oh, yes, yes—Colonel Hathi. The Man-cub is with me. I'm taking him back to the Man Village.

HATHI: To stay?

BAGHEERA: You have the word of Bagheera.

HATHI: Good. And remember, an elephant never forgets. I don't know what the army's coming to these days. These young whippersnappers, who do they think they are? Let's get on with it! Right face. Forward, march!

WINIFRED: Dear, haven't you forgotten something?

HATHI: Nonsense, Winifred old girl. An elephant never forgets.

WINIFRED: Well, you just forgot our son.

HATHI: Ah, son? Oh, son! Oh, yes, yes—quite right. Ah, heh. To the rear—march!

BABY: When I grow up I'm going to be a Colonel just like my fa...

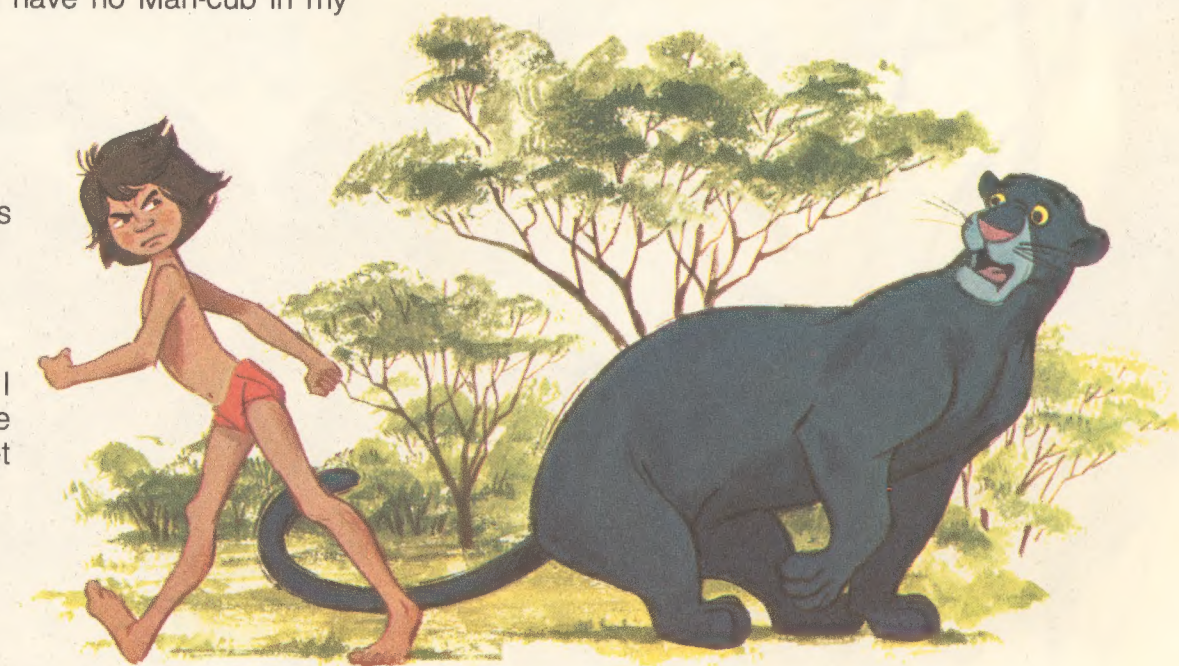

HATHI: If I've told you once, I've told you a thousand times...

BABY: Pop! Look out! Gee, Pop, you forgot to say "Halt"!

MOWGLI: Ha, ha, ha! And he said an elephant never forgets! Ha, ha, ha!

BAGHEERA: It's not funny! Now let's get out of here quick, before anything else happens!

Well, we ran out of that scene as fast as we could and caught our breath at a stream where a fallen tree provided a bridge. "You're going back to the Man Village right now!" I told Mowgli. "You're going if I have to drag you every inch of the way!" And that is exactly what I had to do. But it became a ridiculous tug-of-war, with the boy holding onto a tree and me tugging at him. Then I lost my grip, fell off the log bridge into the stream, bumped my head on the bottom of the log when I came up, and—well, that was the last straw! "Oh, that does it, Man-cub! From now on, you're on your own—alone!" As I left, leaping into the trees, I heard the boy calling after me, "Don't worry about me!" Oh, but I did worry. And well I might have, with good cause. His very first meeting on his own was with the no-account jungle-bum bear named Baloo.

BALOO: Well, it's a doo-bah-dee-doo. Yes, it's a doo-bah-dee-doo. I mean a doobee doobee doobee doobee doo-bah-dee-doo. And with—well now, ha, ha! What have we here? Hmm. Hey! What a funny little bit of a—oh!

MOWGLI: Go away!

BALOO: Oh, boy! I've seen everything in these woods. Whoo! What have I run on? What a pretty thing this is!

MOWGLI: Leave me alone!

BALOO: Well now, that's pretty big talk, little bratches.

MOWGLI: I'm big enough!

BALOO: Ha, ha! Pitiful. Hey kid, you need help, and old Baloo's going to learn you to fight like a bear. Now come on, I'm going to show you. Grr. Ha, ha, yeah! All right now, kid, loosen up—get real loose and then start to weave. Weave a little, now move. That's it!

BAGHEERA: Oh, no! It's Baloo. That shiftless, stupid jungle bum!

BALOO: Weave about, now. Look for an opening. Keep moving. Keep—ha, ha, ha, now you're getting it, kid. Ha, ha, come on, that's it. Ha, ha, ha. He's a dandy.

BAGHEERA: Fine teacher you are, old iron paws.

BALOO: Oh, thanks, Bagheera.

BAGHEERA: Tell me, tell me—after you knock your pupil senseless, how do you expect him to remember the lesson? Hmm?

BALOO: Well, I—I—well, I didn't mean to lay it on him so hard.

MOWGLI: I'm not hurt. I'm all right. I'm a lot tougher than some people think.

BALOO: You better believe it. Now let's go once more. Now I want you to keep circling, or I'm going to knock your roof in again. You better keep moving—ow! Hey! Right on the button! You know something? You're all right, kid. What do they call you?

BAGHEERA: Mowgli. And he's going back to the Man Village right now!

BALOO: Man Village? They'll ruin him! They'll make a Man out of him!

MOWGLI: Oh, Baloo! I want to stay here with you.

BALOO: Certainly you do!

BAGHEERA: Oh? And just how do you think he will survive?

BALOO: He's with me ain't he? And I'll learn him all I know.

BAGHEERA: Well, that shouldn't take too long.

BALOO: Look! Now, it's like this, little bratches. All you've got to do is look for the bare necessities.

"THE BARE NECESSITIES" SONG

BALOO: Ha, ha, ha! Beautiful! That's real jungle harmony.

MOWGLI: I like being a bear!

BALOO: That's my boy. And you're going to make one swell bear. Why, you even sing like one. Yeah!

I didn't stay around to listen, more's the pity. For if I had, I might have saved them from a lot of trouble, because it all turned into a lot of monkey business! Monkeys swooped down from the treetops and swept Mowgli up, just out of Baloo's reach.

BALOO: Bagheera!!!

When I arrived and learned what had happened this time, it was not hard to guess where those monkeys were taking Mowgli. To the ancient ruins! I hated to think what would happen when he met the King of the Monkeys. We hurried in that direction, but Mowgli was far ahead, being hustled through the tree tops toward that monarch of the monkeys, King Louie! I remembered him well—a huge orang-utan, whose crown was made of banana peels.

1ST MONKEY: We got him, King Louie!

2ND MONKEY: Here he is. Man, we got him, we got him!

LOUIE: Ha, ha, ha! So you're the Man-cub. Crazy!

MOWGLI: I'm not as crazy as you are. Put me down! Oof! You cut that out!

LOUIE: Cool it, boy. Unwind yourself. Now come on, let's shake, cousin!

MOWGLI: What do you want me for?

LOUIE: Word has grabbed my royal ear—have a banana—that you want to stay in the jungle.

MOWGLI: Stay in the jungle?! I sure do!

LOUIE: Well, good. And old King Louie, that's me, can fix it for you. Have two bananas. Have we got a deal?

MOWGLI: Yes, sir. I'll do—I'll do anything to stay in the jungle.

LOUIE: Well, then, I'll lay it on the line for you.

"I WAN'NA BE LIKE YOU" SONG

BAGHEERA: Fire? So that's what that scoundrel's after!

BALOO: I'll tear him limb from limb. I'll beat him, I'll—I'll—um—yeah! Well, man, what a beat!

BAGHEERA: Will you stop that silly beat business and listen? This will take brains, not brawn.

BALOO: You better believe it, and I'm loaded with both!

BAGHEERA: Will you listen?

BALOO: Oh, yeah, yeah!

BAGHEERA: Now, while you create a disturbance, I'll rescue Mowgli. Got that?

BALOO: I'm gone, man. Solid gone!

BAGHEERA: Not yet, Baloo!

"I WAN'NA BE LIKE YOU" SONG continued

MONKEYS: It's Baloo, the bear! Yeah, that's him! How'd that square get in there?

MOWGLI: Baloo! It's you!

The chase that followed was something to see. In the course of it Baloo and King Louie took some real swinging turns that loosened one of the ancient pillars, and it shook the whole ancient temple down. Baloo overtook Mowgli and me, and for the first time we shared a good laugh between us.

That night, after Mowgli was asleep, I tried to explain to Baloo that, for the young lad, next time it would not be just a pack of silly monkeys. It would be Shere Khan, the Tiger.

"Stop worrying, Baggy. Stop worrying. I'll take care of him," Baloo assured me. He pointed out that Mowgli was his adopted son, but finally it was this fact that made it easier to convince him he must think of what was best for the boy.

The next morning Baloo tried to explain to Mowgli why he had to go back to the Man Village. He didn't have much luck. The boy listened, but when it was all over he cried, "You said we were partners, Baloo! You're just like—like old Bagheera!"

Then he ran deep into the jungle. Baloo followed but lost him in the dense growth. When I learned what had happened, I joined in the search. Baloo kept blaming himself, saying, "If anything happens to that little guy, I'll never forgive myself! I've got to find him!" Then we heard Colonel Hathi's Elephant Patrol approaching.

"COLONEL HATHI'S MARCH" SONG

BAGHEERA: Stop! Wait a minute! Halt!

HATHI: Who said, "Halt"? I give the commands around here! Now speak up. Who was it?

BAGHEERA: Oh, it was me, Colonel.

HATHI: What do you mean, sir, taking over my command? Highly irregular, you know.

BAGHEERA: Oh, Colonel, I'm sorry, but—but I need your help.

HATHI: Absolutely impossible. We're on a cross-country march.

BAGHEERA: But it's an emergency, Colonel. The Man-cub must be found.

HATHI: Man-cub? What Man-cub?

SHERE KHAN: How interesting.

BAGHEERA: The one I was taking to the Man Village.

HATHI: Good. That's where he belongs. And now, sir, if you don't mind, we'd like to get on with the march.

BAGHEERA: No, no, no, you don't understand, Hathi. He is lost. He ran away.

SHERE KHAN: How delightful.

HATHI: Well, serves the young whippersnapper right.

BAGHEERA: But—but Shere Khan, the Tiger—he's sure to pick up the Man-cub's trail.

HATHI: Ha, ha, Shere Khan. Nonsense, old boy, Shere Khan isn't within miles of here.

SHERE KHAN: Heh, heh, heh, hmm.

HATHI: Oh, sorry, Bagheera—fortunes of war, and all that sort of thing, you know.

WINIFRED: This has gone far enough! Far enough! Now just a minute, you pompous old windbag!

HATHI: Winifred! What are you doing out of ranks?

WINIFRED: Never mind. How would you like to have our boy lost and alone in the jungle?

HATHI: Our son, alone? But, Winifred, old girl, that's an entirely different matter.

WINIFRED: Huh!

HATHI: Different, entirely.

WINIFRED: That little boy is no different than our own son. Now, you help find him, or I'm taking over command.

HATHI: What! A female leading my herd? Utterly preposterous!

BABY: Pop, the Man-cub and I are friends. He'll get hurt if we don't find him. Please, Pop, sir, please?

HATHI: Now, don't you worry, son.

Your father had a plan in mind all the time.

WINIFRED: Hah! Sure you did.

HATHI: Ah! Troopers! Company, left face! Now, you volunteers will find the lost Man-cub.

BAGHEERA: Oh, thank you, Colonel! There's no time to lose!

We were unaware of it, but while we talked to Colonel Hathi, Shere Khan, Mowgli's deadliest enemy, was listening in the shadows. Now he knew the boy was somewhere alone in the jungle. So, all alone and friendless, Mowgli wandered in the jungle until he was spotted by four vultures.

BUZZIE: Hey, Flaps, what we gonna do?

FLAPS: I don't know. What you wanna do?

ZIGGY: I've got it! Let's flap over to the east side of the jungle. They've always got a bit of action. A bit of a swingin' scene—all right?

BUZZIE: Aw, come off it. Things are right dead all over.

ZIGGY: You mean you wish they were, ha, ha, ha.

DIZZY: Very funny.

BUZZIE: Oh, come on, what's wrong? You know you look like you haven't got a friend in the world.

MOWGLI: I haven't.

DIZZY: Haven't you got a mother or a father?

MOWGLI: No, nobody wants me around.

BUZZIE: Yeah, we know how you feel.

DIZZY: Nobody wants us around, either.

BUZZIE: Oh, we may look a bit shabby, but we've got hearts.

DIZZY: And feelings, too.

BUZZIE: And just to prove it to you, we're gonna let you join our little group.

FLAPS: Kid, we'd like to make you an honorary vulture.

MOWGLI: Thanks, but I—I'd rather be on my own, alone.

BUZZIE: Ah, now look, kid—everybody's got to have friends. Hey, fellows, are we his friends?

"THAT'S WHAT FRIENDS ARE FOR" SONG

Meanwhile Shere Khan had crept close. Just one look at his great fangs, powerful shoulders and sharp claws threw the vultures into a complete panic. They retreated to the treetops, and Mowgli faced Shere Khan alone. But not for long, for just as the tiger lunged, that good old, shiftless, wonderful bear Baloo caught hold of Shere Khan's tail and stopped him—inches short of his small-boy target. Lashing about to get at the bear on his tail, Shere Khan's jaws crashed together like thunder. And then, cracking his tail like a whip, he again tried to get Mowgli—but Baloo held on doggedly.

DIZZY: Hold it, Lads! Look! Look what's coming our way.

FLAPS: Hey, what in the world is that?

ZIGGY: What a crazy lookin' bunch of bones.

DIZZY: Yeah, an' they're all walking about by themselves.

ZIGGY: Come on, lads, come on! Let's have some fun with this little fella, this little blokey.

FLAPS: Blimey, he's got legs like a stork, he has.

BUZZIE: Like a stork. But he ain't got no feathers, he ain't.

MOWGLI: Go ahead. Laugh. I don't care.

DIZZY: What's wrong with him?

FLAPS: I think we overdid it.

DIZZY: We were just having a bit of fun, that's all.

BUZZIE: Aw, just look at him. Why, the poor little fellow. You know, he must be down on his luck.

DIZZY: Yeah, or he wouldn't be in our neighborhood.

BUZZIE: Hey, new kid, wait a minute! Hey!

MOWGLI: Just leave me alone.

A rising storm sounded like only an echo of the furious battle below. Lightning stabbed down to set a tree afire with a shattering crash. Baloo was locked in a stubborn hold on the tiger's back, but he was tiring. He could not take much more of Shere Khan's battering. And then Buzzie the vulture, his eyes on the flaming tree, shouted, "Fire! That's it! It's the only thing Ol' Stripes is afraid of!" The vultures said to Mowgli, "You get the fire! We'll do the rest!" One of Shere Khan's mightiest blows suddenly ended the conflict for Baloo. He landed with a thud a dozen feet away, beyond a stony ridge. The vultures gave the tiger no chance to turn on Mowgli. They flapped and swooshed around Shere Khan, keeping up a heckling chatter, to draw his attention to them while Mowgli came up from behind the tiger with a burning branch from the fiery tree. The boy quickly tied the branch to the tiger's tail with a stout vine and finished just as its flames began licking at the tiger's fur.

SHERE KHAN: "Yeeeeow!"

Let me tell you, it was a beautiful sight. That tiger went over the farthest hill and through the jungle like a flaming comet. Then, just over the ridge, we saw Baloo lying still and lifeless. Our tears joined with the rain that had begun to fall. Even the vultures wept for poor Baloo. I spoke a few words in memory of our friend and proclaimed the place a hallowed spot, because here he had sacrificed his life. We did not realize that Baloo was playing 'possum and enjoying every nice word I said about him. Only when it was over did he raise his head to protest that my funeral oration had ended too soon. Needless to say, Mowgli was overjoyed at being reunited with Baloo, and the two of them vowed that, "Nothin' or nobody is ever going to come between us again!" Then a little further along the trail we heard a voice in the distance, singing. We were near the Man Village, and the singer was a young girl, about Mowgli's age. She had come to a pool just outside the village to get a jug of water. Mowgli had never seen anything like her before.

MOWGLI: Look! What's that?

BAGHEERA: Oh, it's the Man Village.

MOWGLI: No, no! I mean that!

BALOO: Forget about those—they ain't nothin' but trouble!

MOWGLI: Just a minute. I've never seen one before.

BALOO: So you've seen one—so let's go!

MOWGLI: I'll be right back. I want a better look.

BALOO: Mowgli! Wait a minute.

BAGHEERA: Aw, Baloo, let him have a better look.

"MY OWN HOME" SONG

BALOO: Mowgli, come back! Come back!

BAGHEERA: Go on, go on.

BALOO: He's hooked!

BAGHEERA: Ah, it was inevitable, Baloo. The boy couldn't help himself. It was bound to happen. Mowgli is where he belongs now.

BALOO: Yeah, I guess you're right. But I still think he'd've made one swell bear. Well, come on, Baggy-buddy, let's get back to where we belong. And get with the beat.
